

Cornerstone Dental — August 2026 Digital Advertising Summary

Reporting period: August 1 – August 31, 2026

Back-to-School Season Arrives

Late August is when the calendar starts filling again. Families come back from vacation, school schedules lock in, and the checkups that got postponed in July become this week's problem. It's one of the two or three moments in the year when being easy to find matters most — and August was the month the campaign reached its highest visibility on record.

The Month in Numbers

- Market share: 21.06% — a new high, and a third straight month above 20%
- Ad impressions: 22,641 (up 4.5% from July's 21,660)
- Clicks: 806 (up 4.3%) at a 3.56% click-through rate
- Tracked phone calls from ads: 144 (up from 140)
- Phone clicks from ads: 105 (up from 100)
- Combined ad-driven phone activity: 249 touches — a fourth consecutive monthly increase
- Ad visitors to the site: 413 (up 20% from 344), staying an average of 2 minutes 36 seconds

Visibility at a New High

Market share is the number that has been telling the story all year. It measures how often Cornerstone's ad appears out of all the times it could have appeared for a relevant search. In February and March it sat around 12%. June pushed it to nearly 21%, July held there, and August edged past both to 21.06% — roughly one in every five relevant searches in the area.

What makes August different from July is that the gain came with growth rather than instead of it. July was flat on reach; August added 4.5% more impressions and 4.3% more clicks while holding the click-through rate steady at 3.56%. Getting more of both at once, without the response rate slipping, is the healthy version of expansion.

New Patient did the heavy lifting again. The practice's priority campaign produced 9,445 impressions and 396 clicks at a 4.19% click-through rate, and reached a 24.48% market share — its strongest yet and the highest of any campaign in the account. Nearly nine out of ten ad visitors landed directly on the new-patient page, which is exactly where that spend is meant to send them.

The Phone Kept Ringing More

Phone activity rose for a fourth month running. Tracked calls from ads reached 144 and phone clicks reached 105, for 249 combined touches — up from 240 in July, 239 in June and 210 in May. That's a steady, four-month climb rather than a one-month jump, which is usually a better sign than a spike. For a practice where most new-patient decisions still happen over the phone, this is the conversion measure that matters most.

Campaign Snapshot

Behind New Patient, General/Preventative carried the next largest share of volume at 6,269 impressions and 206 clicks. Cosmetic Dentistry (2,225 impressions), Restorative Dentistry (1,884) and Root Canal (1,591) each delivered 52–53 clicks, and Orthodontics added 46 more.

Root Canal reached a 21.25% market share — worth calling out because urgent-need searches convert faster than almost anything else. Someone searching that term at 9pm is not comparison shopping; they're looking for whoever is visible. Within the General/Preventative group the more routine phrasings did well too — Family Dentist returned a 4.26% click-through rate and Dental Checkup 4.32%, both above the campaign average.

Who Showed Up

The ad audience returned to a more typical shape this month: about 57% women, and weighted toward the older end, with the 65-plus bracket the single largest identified group at 23.2%. That's a reversal of the younger skew that appeared in July and a return to the pattern seen through the spring.

Knoxville supplied the clear majority of ad visitors at 149, with Farragut (21), Oak Ridge (10), Pigeon Forge (8) and Powell (7) filling in the surrounding area. One small but interesting note: Clinton produced 11 clicks from just 63 impressions — a 17.46% click-through rate, far above anything else in the geographic data. It's tiny volume, but it suggests unusually strong intent in that pocket and may be worth a closer look.

Where This Points

Three months at or above 20% market share, four months of rising phone activity, and a new visibility high as the fall season opens — August was the strongest overall position the campaign has held this year. September and October are typically steady months for a practice, and the aim from here is to keep converting that visibility into phone calls while testing whether the reach can extend a little further into the surrounding towns without diluting the response rate.
